Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not participate in any exercise program. The HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The HR decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 120/80 to 110/70 mmHg. The control group showed no significant changes in HR or BP. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Abstract

© 2004 Blackwell Publishing Ltd Journal of Internal Medicine 255: 115–122

THESE ARE THE BEST FISHING BOATS IN THE WORLD. THE ONLY ONE YOU CAN AFFORD TO OWN IS THE ONE YOU CAN AFFORD TO OWN.

1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be improved.

GET YOUR SCALP FROM THE FINGERHOLE TEST!

There are several ways to test your scalp. The most common is the "Fingerhole Test". This test is done by inserting your finger into the scalp. If you feel a sharp pain, you have a scalp problem. If you feel no pain, you are fine.

Shortchanging Swindlers

Police Are Cracking Down on These Hoodlums, Whose Annual Yield Is $100,000,000

GO through any police blotter in any city you want, and you'll soon discover that the number of convictions never lags very far behind the number of actual crimes committed. Today, law-enforcement agencies are rubbing the quantity of most of its heinous hoodlums and racketeers.

But there is one type of criminal against whom the wheels of justice grind a great deal more slowly—the shortchange hoodlum. For one thing, the shortchange work operates on such a small scale that even when he is caught, an honest but foolish employer or store owner rarely bothers to make a complaint.

Did we say he operates on a small scale? Perhaps, individually. But the national take by shortchange artists exceeds $100,000,000!

But before we get too deeply into this examination, let us first remind you that the average, typical employer is honest. Otherwise, this country would have been swindled outright by the petty thieves long ago!

The most common form of short-changing, of course, occurs in a store or theatre. Different techniques are used in both cases, but the psychology underlying both is the same. Both trade heavily on the average person's weakness and common decency.

Imagine yourself at the head of a line of customers at the cashier's cage. You know there are people behind you who are anxious to get their parcels checked and paid for, and get home. The cashier builds up within you, and makes you a perfect setup for a fast-talking customer who keeps up his incessant chatter while giving you a fast count.

The cashier knows that, nine times out of ten, you won't hold up the line to count your change. That was one of the reasons why he gave you your change in small bills and coins. If you're like the majority of people, you'll simply pocket the money, and rush off.

Meanwhile, the dishonest cashier has swindled you out of a dollar or a few cents. Small stuff? Maybe, but he's done the same thing to the man behind you, and the customer behind him. It adds up.

Shaved operators never pocket the money themselves—not at once. After all, you might be a private detective, and the bill you handed him might be marked. Therefore, he waits until his lunch hour, or to the end of the day's business before collecting his take.

Crooked cashiers in movie houses use a variation of this. They take advantage of the fact that it is impossible to hold a cashier's book without cash all areas which the individual customer can't see. These are known as the trade or "blind spots."

The cashier counts out your correct change, but leaves one coin, usually a quarter or half a dollar, in the blind spot. You wrap up your change, leaving the blind-spotted coin where it is.

The cashier doesn't pocket this right away. He takes no chance. After all, you might count your change in the lobby and come tearing back to demand the missing coin. In that case, he gives you a look of utmost distress and points respectfully to the coin.

You spot the missing piece of silver, pocket it, and, feeling lucky, dash away. But most people, according to the police, don't count their change. They simply pocket what they get and walk right on. The cashier waits until he's fairly certain you've already exited and murmured in the mirror before he claims the coin.

As we pointed out before, not all cashiers are crooked, and in a recent case, it was a theatre cashier's honesty which brought her immediate exposure, the theatre manager, to the attention of the police.

In this case, the manager was releasing the theatre owners, not the customers. Theatres, as you know, rarely refuse to refund the purchase price of an admission ticket. What the theatre manager did was to release the ticket taker at least twice a day, and have present two or three tickets to the cashier for refunds. Of course, he pocketed the money while the original holders of the tickets were enjoying the movie itself.

The cashier became suspicious when the greedy manager upped his refund requests to about seven or eight on the first evening of a new film for which long lines had formed to get in. He figured, correctly, that people who wait in line to get into a movie area's that anxious to get out at least, not even or right at a time!

Shortchange checks with the other side of the counter, too. The nearest truth in this category requires two heads working together. Here is how this one works.

Check No. 1 enters a drug store, purchases a bottle of aspirin, and hands the clerk a $20 bill. Later, his collaborator enters and he, too, makes a small purchase paying for it with a $5 bill.

Half an hour later, the second customer-checks cash back into the store and hysterically claims that the clerk did not give him the correct change for the $20 bill he had handed him. What's more, the customer can prove what he's saying, because he had written a phone number on the $20 he had given him.

The clerk opens the register, and sure enough, there it is—the correct phone number boldly written on one line of the large bill. The clerk, you can be sure, is happy to make restitution, thereby losing just $10.

What can you do about these short-change cheaters? Police say they can be stopped cold if you:

1. Always count your change after being certain of the exact denomination you handed the cashier, and

2. Report anything suspicious to your police agency.

MAGIC TRICKS

AGE 10-12

Here's a simple magic trick that will make you look like a real magician. You'll need a glass of water and a small bottle of oil. The trick is to make the oil float on the water. This is a great trick to show your friends.

While he is waiting the magic,
the boy should say: "Watch me make the water in the glass come alive and float on the oil. It's magic all right, isn't it?"
Then the boy should say: "Watch me make the water in the glass
